Written a great term paper that you want to share? Got an interesting idea for a paper you are working on this semester? Then submit a proposal to the Italian Studies annual Undergraduate Research Conference! Whatever your major, if you are writing on anything related to Italian culture, we want to hear from you! Translation, art, film, history, queer theory, gender theory, from the medieval to the modern, we want to know about it! Send us an abstract (a brief description) of the 15 minute paper you would like to present. If your paper is selected, we will then place you on a panel with related papers and provide you with a graduate student mentor who will help you polish your paper for presentation. The conference will include lunch for participants and will be open to the public. Its a great way to hone your writing and presentation skills while sharing your ideas with both students and scholars.

Abstracts (150 words) to be submitted by

February 19, 2017

Submissions / inquiries:
Katherine Travers
katherine.travers@nyu.edu